Terrace Park Historical Society

October 2004

Tracking Our Past and Present for the Future

From our new Co-President...

John and I are excited about taking over as co-presidents of the Terrace Park Historical Society. It is a hard act for us to follow Carol Cole, who led the effort to organize the Society. Dedicated Trustees and other volunteers, joined in to process records, memorabilia and to record oral histories—materials which could be lost forever if action was not taken to collect and properly preserve it.

At the Society's open house on November 7, you will see the amazing results of the work done by Carol and the volunteers for the past three years. If you have photos, books, or other Terrace Park memorabilia to share with us for that program, we would love to display them. Call either Carol Cole, 831-6771 or John Rockaway, 965-8660.

About us—John and I each grew up in the village. After many years away from Ohio, John and his wife, Linda, purchased "Gravelotte" at 720 Elm, did extensive remodeling, and then moved to that home in 2001.

My children were raised in the village, and although I now live in Northern Kentucky, Terrace Park is still "home". In 1990 I produced "Terrace Park, With Love", a video scrapbook about the village. The video is dedicated to my father, Bud Heil, who also loved Terrace Park and had "discovered" it when he was a small boy and loved to fish in the river.

Now, we are very excited about keeping the momentum going for the organization, inspiring new memberships, and encouraging more current members to become active.

We look forward to a great year ahead for the Terrace Park Historical Society. We are planning a program about Miami Grove for a spring 2005 meeting, and are contacting former residents and their families for information. Perhaps many current residents have never heard of "the Grove", which was established in the area which is now the Nature Preserve. This community was not a part of Terrace Park, but had unusual political and social impact on our residents and the village. We feel this program will be enlightening and interesting.
